- Faculty and students from the participating institutes are invited to take part in the program through the use of a virtual platform that allows for one-on-one interaction between the participants. Ten to twelve pupils are required to enroll from each institution. The students will intern with two different national or international partner institutions or universities, for three to four weeks each year.
- The two institutions will "connect" through video conferencing and text chat. Every day in a linking class, half of the students will participate in a group video conference with their partners, while the other half will engage in individual text chats with their partners (preferably on SLACK). The groups will switch their linking mode in the next week.
- Students will gain a greater understanding of the topic's diversity through group talks while gaining more in-depth viewpoints through one-on-one conversations. During their three to four weeks with a given partner university, students will engage in structured discussions and joint projects on a predetermined topic.
