- During the COVID-19 pandemic, St. Aloysius College, adapted to the challenges of remote learning to ensure the continuity of education.
- The college utilized various online platforms, including Google Classroom, Google Meet, and Zoom, to facilitate this transition.
- This adaptation was part of a broader move towards digital learning, which became essential due to the pandemic-induced restrictions on in-person classes.
- The use of Google Classroom at St. Aloysius College during the pandemic allowed for a structured and organized way to manage classes, assignments, and communication between teachers and students.

- Google Classroom, being a part of Google Workspace for Education, offers a range of tools designed to enhance teaching and learning experiences. It enables educators to create engaging lessons that can be personalized and measured, fostering a collaborative and secure learning environment.
- Moreover, the integration of Google Classroom with other Google tools, such as Google Meet for video conferencing, allowed for real-time classes and interactions, mimicking the in-person classroom experience to some extent. This integration was vital in maintaining the quality of education and student engagement during a period of unprecedented disruption to traditional teaching and learning method.
- St. Aloysius College's use of Google Classroom and other digital platforms during the COVID-19 pandemic was part of a comprehensive strategy to ensure the continuity of education.

The screenshot shows the Gmail web interface. On the left, the navigation sidebar includes 'Mail', 'Chat', and 'Meet'. The main content area displays the 'Inbox' with a 'Compose' button at the top. Below the inbox, there are sections for 'Get started with Gmail' (Customize your inbox, Set a signature), 'Gmail Team' announcements, and storage usage ('Using 3,365.92 GB'). A floating menu on the right side of the screen contains icons for various Google services: Account, Gmail, Drive, Classroom (highlighted with a blue border), Docs, Sheets, Slides, Calendar, and Chat. A notification dialog box is open in the bottom right corner, titled 'Missing message notifications?'. It contains the text: 'Gmail needs permission to send notifications. To turn on notifications, click Continue and then Allow when prompted by your browser. You can change how many notifications you get in conversation settings and Gmail settings.' Below the text are two buttons: 'Continue' and 'No thanks'.
